“ This woman ment so much to every single one of her children. In todays world that says alot! My dear friend, i have watched through the years drive 2 hours away, many weekends, just to spend time with her mother. Over the past year them trips increased, as did her tears. The struggle of miss gayles sickness i know took a toll on her and her family. The pain has come to an end for her, for she is now safe in jesus arms with more joy and comfort then we could ever imagine. I know this is hard and i pray everyone of her children find peace in knowing this isnt goodbye completely, as wonderful as u all are (an i know because your sister says) you will see her again one day with no pain, just happiness and peace. God bless you all until then. This woman left her legacy in all of you! I love u kay!

*Sincerely,
Charity*

“ I am truly at a loss for words. Those that know me know that is truly rare. Just wanted to share that this morning I was sitting outside of my nanny's home right after waking and as I sat on the same porch I've sat under for so many years. I looked out upon that yard and thought of this wonderful beautiful woman that I have called on for every thing for forever and as I sat there thinking I saw a baby red bird fly in the yard and life upon the tree in the front yard. That baby red bird sat in the limb and looked directly my way and I knew I knew right then she was at peace and okay. I knew then that she knew how much we all loved her. I knew she had met our lord and he let a little bit of her spirit come down and fly pain free and happy as that baby red bird. Fly high nanny. Until we meet again I will always love you and I will raise Asher in a way that will make you proud I promise. Love love love

“ I know there are no words and time does not make it better. We are forced to learn to live with our loss but it doesnt make it any easier. Having lost both my parents I understand your pain and the lost feeling. I pray that you all find comfort in eachother. Ms. Gayle was always sweet and made me feel welcome the times I was there in her home. May God bless her family.
